

SPREAD INFORMATION NOT PANIC

When reporting or signal boosting potential threats or ICE activity: provide as much information as possible! Rumors and unconfirmed reports spread fear and waste community member's time.

S.A.L.U.T.E.

Size/Strength

"3-4 armed men"

Actions/Activity

"Stopping people leaving the library"

Location & Direction

"Downtown Boulder Public Library"

Uniform/Clothes

"Dark jackets, plate carriers, ball caps"

Time & Date of Observation

"8:32 AM June 1st"

Equipment & Weapons

"Hand guns, pepper spray, 2 cruisers"

Not Useful: "URGENT: ICE raid at the library!"

Useful: "Suspected ICE activity: 4 cops in masks, stopping people at the downtown Boulder Public library at 8:32am - 6/1. Agency has not been identified. They have handguns, 2 cruisers, and pepper spray."

SPREAD INFORMATION NOT PANIC

When reporting or signal boosting potential threats or ICE activity: provide as much information as possible! Rumors and unconfirmed reports spread fear and waste community member's time.

S.A.L.U.T.E.

Size/Strength

"3-4 armed men"

Actions/Activity

"Stopping people leaving the library"

Location & Direction

"Downtown Boulder Public Library"

Uniform/Clothes

"Dark jackets, plate carriers, ball caps"

Time & Date of Observation

"8:32 AM June 1st"

Equipment & Weapons

"Hand guns, pepper spray, 2 cruisers"

Not Useful: "URGENT: ICE raid at the library!"

Useful: "Suspected ICE activity: 4 cops in masks, stopping people at the downtown Boulder Public library at 8:32am - 6/1. Agency has not been identified. They have handguns, 2 cruisers, and pepper spray."

SEVEN STEPS TO STOP ICE

- 1 Form resistance groups.

Form tight-knit groups to play roles in the resistance. You and your friends may already form the core of such a group. You could focus on communications, intelligence gathering, fundraising, or some other task. Meet with others you trust and start making plans. Foster ties between different groups and demographics. Like an iceberg, the majority of your connections should be deep below the surface.
- 2 Establish community assemblies.

Bring together formal groups, community networks, and other concerned individuals to share information, coordinate campaigns, interchange resources, and strategize together. Build the foundations for enduring trust and long-term coordination.
- 3 Build a communications system.

Set up a rapid response network capable of verifying reports and spreading information immediately to large numbers of people about the operations of ICE and other federal mercenaries in your community.
- 4 Strategize and set a combative example.

Map the infrastructure and support institutions that ICE depends on. Publicize their vulnerabilities. Popularize simple, reproducible ways to impose consequences every time that ICE inflicts harm on a community. Rather than only reacting in a way that permits them to set the terms of each encounter, aim to choose the time and place of confrontations.
- 5 Compel local politicians to break off cooperation with federal authorities.

So far, non-cooperation with ICE has been performative at best. Pressure local politicians, public institutions, and other influential groups to concretely oppose ICE operations rather than simply standing aside. The consequences of cooperating with ICE, whether actively or passively, must be worse than the consequences of not doing so.
- 6 Create no-go zones for federal forces.

If ICE agents hesitate to enter certain areas without backing from police, National Guard, and Marines, that will limit their operations. The more resources they have to commit to every raid, the fewer attacks they will be able to carry out and the more expensive their power grab will be.
- 7 Create mutual aid networks.

Support those who have lost family members to ICE abductions. Create collective habits of care to sustain each other through the crises ahead.

CRIMETHING.COM/STOPICE

SEVEN STEPS TO STOP ICE

- 1 Form resistance groups.

Form tight-knit groups to play roles in the resistance. You and your friends may already form the core of such a group. You could focus on communications, intelligence gathering, fundraising, or some other task. Meet with others you trust and start making plans. Foster ties between different groups and demographics. Like an iceberg, the majority of your connections should be deep below the surface.
- 2 Establish community assemblies.

Bring together formal groups, community networks, and other concerned individuals to share information, coordinate campaigns, interchange resources, and strategize together. Build the foundations for enduring trust and long-term coordination.
- 3 Build a communications system.

Set up a rapid response network capable of verifying reports and spreading information immediately to large numbers of people about the operations of ICE and other federal mercenaries in your community.
- 4 Strategize and set a combative example.

Map the infrastructure and support institutions that ICE depends on. Publicize their vulnerabilities. Popularize simple, reproducible ways to impose consequences every time that ICE inflicts harm on a community. Rather than only reacting in a way that permits them to set the terms of each encounter, aim to choose the time and place of confrontations.
- 5 Compel local politicians to break off cooperation with federal authorities.

So far, non-cooperation with ICE has been performative at best. Pressure local politicians, public institutions, and other influential groups to concretely oppose ICE operations rather than simply standing aside. The consequences of cooperating with ICE, whether actively or passively, must be worse than the consequences of not doing so.
- 6 Create no-go zones for federal forces.

If ICE agents hesitate to enter certain areas without backing from police, National Guard, and Marines, that will limit their operations. The more resources they have to commit to every raid, the fewer attacks they will be able to carry out and the more expensive their power grab will be.
- 7 Create mutual aid networks.

Support those who have lost family members to ICE abductions. Create collective habits of care to sustain each other through the crises ahead.

CRIMETHING.COM/STOPICE